Overview

This presentation gives parents, families, teachers and professionals effective tools for understanding and addressing challenging behaviors, including a review of the Applied Behavior Analysis and positive behavior supports.

Presenter: Regis Lazor

Special Education Professor and Behavior Consultant,
California University of Pennsylvania

Regis Lazor has spent his entire career working in the field of Special Education. He has been a professor at California University of PA for 37 years. Throughout those years, he has been extremely active in working with schools, agencies and families, especially in dealing with challenging behavior and building positive behavior alternatives. His work with persons diagnosed as Autism Spectrum Disorders (ASD) has ranged from designing preschool environments to adapting work environments for adults. He specializes in Applied Behavior Analysis, the fundamental principle behind today's most effective strategies used with persons with an ASD diagnosis. He has been a consultant for Fayette Resources since its inception, designing training programs for staff, improving service delivery systems, and preparing specific programs for individuals with specific instructional and behavioral needs.
